Seminar E-vite

Managing long term ill or injured employees including stress related claims.

Dealing with ill or injured employees and making decisions in relation to suitable duties, return to work or, in more serious cases, whether the employee can return to work at all, is an area of law fraught with risk. Getting it wrong can expose the business to possible claims including discrimination, unfair or unlawful dismissal and adverse action claims.

This briefing will focus on practical considerations when dealing with ill or injured employees and the management of their return to work. The briefing will also consider the rise of stress-related claims and how businesses may best manage these types of claims.
